'Inner development goals'

The inner training path for the UN Sustainable Development Goals

Roland Tüscher

The logo of the Inner Development Goals (IDG) points to the psychological-spiritual operation of an organization of the same name (IDG). In their basic paper<sup>1</sup> a too slow realization of the '17 goals for sustainable development' ('Sustainable Development Goals' / SDGs) of the 'Agenda 2030' of the United Nations (UN) is stated. The IDGs now provide a framework for action, or an inner training path for the individual, for the accelerated implementation of the SDGs. Work has begun to implement this globally through government and business actors.

The initiators of the 'Inner Development Goals' assessed the implementation of the '2030 Sustainability Agenda' as insufficient: people's participation was "disappointing"<sup>1</sup>. They considered:
